Which is correct: “There are not any ... There is/are more than one”. What’s the difference? At least one grammar forum out there has discussed the cat-skinning example with a conclusion that agrees with Wanda and Hydrangea below: use “there is more than one” because “is” goes with “one”, whether it’s one book, one species, one way... There are plenty of results for “are more than one [thing]”, though usually less than the “is” version, so perhaps some speakers don’t ... What does “no love lost” mean and where does it come from? Apr 4, 2014 · Searching Google books, I find that what the phrase originally meant in the 17th and 18th centuries was that “A loves B just as much as B loves A”; the amount of love is balanced, so there is no love lost.
